

Dear sirs,

I read a column that you start telling from 2017 to innocent high school students that Japan Army forced 400,000 Korean girls to become "sex slaves".

If this is true, don't you feel it's a real shame of you?

As a person involved in educating young people for your future, you have to tell what are proved with historical documents and records, which is a theory of academical thinking. The story that Japan Army forced Korean girls to become "sex slaves" is just a fiction made by North/South Korea and PRC, never improved by any record nor by any evidence other than some old liars' witness. There are many records of newspaper advertising that "comfort women" were rewarded with high salary in WW2 by Japan. If Japan Army was able to force Korean girls to be "sex slave", why the advertising was paid to gather "comfort women"? What can you think of as a logical reason?

How many, do you think, were there Japanese soldiers at WW2? How USA won Japan with definitely beating resource volume including the number of soldiers?

If you dare to educate what are not proved with any document nor record, you are devoted just in political thinking influenced by North Korea and by PRC.

As people involved in education, you have to learn more with real records and history.

Otherwise, you are just "poison" for next generation of California!

Looking forward to hearing your justice,

A Japanese citizen who loves our alliance with USA
